SAYVILLE heard an exclamation of astonishment from below, but his machine had already come so close that it was dangerous to descend any farther. He threw in his clutch, and his propeller carried him forward, the helicopter screws automatically locking into a forward-and-aft position to offer the least possible resistance. He climbed again rapidly, circling until he was once more over the hill, and again he hovered with his helicopter.

58,000 AMERICANS DIED LAST YEAR FROM BRIGHT'S DISEASE AND OTHER KIDNEY AILMENTS

Head the Warning in Time—Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy Will Benefit Your Kidneys.

Sufferers from kidney disease are prone to imagine they have dyspepsia, heart disease, nervous prostration, and a hundred and one other ills. Very often the kidneys are so weak and diseased that they are unable to move the waste matter from the body. The accumulation of this matter in the system, slowly but surely, produces a way for Bright's disease. To afford relief you should begin at once the use of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy. Made in Germany, it is a very excellent preparation in the treatment of kidney diseases. Its beneficial action consists in strengthening the kidneys and liver so they may do their work as nature intended. In years of successful practice, it has given evidence of its merit. When you ask for Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy, be sure you get it. Don't accept a substitute.

Sold by all druggists in 50c and $1.00 sizes. A sample sent on request. Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy, Dept. 236, Rochester, N. Y.—Adv.

FOR A BAD COUGH

Here is a fine old-fashioned recipe for coughs, colds or catarrh trouble that has been used for many years with great success. Get from your druggist 1 oz. of Peppermint (Double Strength) and add to it 1/2 pint of hot water and 4 oz. of granulated sugar. Take one tablespoonful 4 times a day.

No more racking your whole body with a cough. Clogged nostrils should open, air passages of your head clear up so you can breathe freely. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has a stubborn cough, or hard cold or catarrh in any form, should give this prescription a trial.—Adv.

ACUTE AND CHRONIC RHEUMATISM

The exact cause of rheumatism is unknown, though it is generally believed to be due to an excess of uric acid in the blood. It may be also due to a general infection. A remedy has been found which is a specific in all cases. In fact the literature of rheumatism shows that there are but few drugs which have not been given a trial. In the hands of one observer we find that a certain drug has been used with the most satisfactory results. Others have found the same remedy to be a great disappointment. All physicians however agree that every condition of treatment is aided by the administration of some remedy to relieve the pain and quiet the nervous system and Dr. W. S. Sedgwick expresses the opinion of thousands of practitioners when he says that anti-kamnia tablets should be given preference over all other remedies for the relief of the pain in all forms of rheumatism. These tablets can be purchased in pharmacies. They are also unsurpassed in headache, neuritis and all pain. Ask for A-K Tablets.

TODAY'S AID TO BEAUTY

An especially fine shampoo for this weather can be easily made at trifling expense by simply dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox in a cup of hot water. Pour slowly on scalp and massage briskly. This creates a soothing, cooling lather that dissolves and removes all dandruff, excess oil and dirt. Rinsing leaves the scalp spotlessly clean, soft and pliant, while the hair takes on a glossy richness of natural color, also a fluffiness which makes it seem very much heavier than it is. After a canthrox shampoo arranging the hair is a pleasure.—Adv.

Choking with the smoke that rolled up thickly over the wall of the hill, he stumbled through the brush, digging his fingers into the ground and groping for a handhold. He was not alone. He passed a rule but that he judged to be Mcclernand's living quarters, and ran under a grove of low trees on the other side.

"Oh, Mcclernand," he cried. "Right here," called a voice, as he heard and cheerfully as though this were a social visit under the pleasantest of circumstances. "Sit right in and draw cards. I'm pleased to see any friend of Hugh Begley's."

Sayville found him crouching in the shelter of a great rock, magazine rifle in his hand, two others lying beside him. "We'd better get out of this right away," gasped the aviator, still choking with the smoke. "It will be too late in a few minutes."

"Oh, no hurry—no hurry," Dan reassured him. "They can't get up here any way but by this path, and I can pick 'em off if they come up. So you fly one of them aeroplanes, do you? Don't you?"

There was a flash and a report from below, and a bullet slipped through the leaves within three feet of his head. "Bless my soul, I almost forgot that fellow," said Dan, and he fired at the flash, scarcely waiting to get his rifle to his shoulder.

"Come," urged Sayville. "There's no use fighting any more." "Oh, please," exclaimed the outlaw. "This isn't fighting. It's more a social conversation. I've been keeping 'em from popping at me the last half hour. It's got one of them old Army forty-eighters. They don't make 'em any more, but I knowed the sing of it. It's mine. I heard it go when I was right back to the old days. It did. Many a time I've laid out like this with them forty-eighters humm'n' all around me. There it goes again."

Once more the man at the foot of the hill fired, and the bullet sounded through the leaves as close to Sayville as the outlaw's head. "Lord, don't get scared," said Mcclernand. "It was a good shot. Don't above us. But didn't it sound nice and homelike—didn't it? I'll bet that fellow used to be in the West in the good old days when a fellow could like to go down and shake his hand and try that old gun just to see if it handles one like I used to. Let's make him give us another one."

Before the aviator could protest, Dan fired, and almost immediately his shot was answered. The bullet from below shattered the rock above them and sprinkled them with stinging chips of the stone.

"Ah, that's better," breathed Mcclernand, and then, turning again to Sayville, he resumed. "You knowed it was a real aeroplane, did you? I don't see how you fellows ever get the nerve to down them—specially that good old snout with the forty eight. Come along. We'll vamoose."

thing in the darkness, and a bullet answered him, splintering the rock even closer than the other.

"That's great!" exclaimed Dan rapturously. "That's just what I say, young fellow, we don't have to go yet, do we? Just when it's getting interesting? Hello! There's a couple of others butt'n in."

From farther to the left there came the reports of three guns in quick succession. They seemed to be a signal, for they were followed by a scattering fire from every vantage point in the shadows below.

"They are ready for you now," shouted Sayville. "They think the fire has come high enough to drive you out, and they intend to kill you the minute you try to escape down this path."

All about them the bullets whined and cut through the trees. Mcclernand crouched low as two more scattered the rocks and bushes.

"I guess that's it," he agreed. "Well, it was a good plan; I'll say that much for them—if they are black. If I hadn't been for you comin', they'd have got me sure. But say, young fellow, this does seem like the old times—good times, eh?—the old times when all hell was loose around me the chances were a thousand to one against my gettin' out. And I always hit the one chance—always that is, except once—and that finished me. Of course, I put it off, but I was there—but the old powder does taste good, don't it? And ain't them guns just like music? Zip! There goes another one. Nine and close, now."

He lay flat on his belly and cautiously crept around the edge of the rock. Instantly he withdrew his head, but the one chance—always that is, except once—and that finished me. Of course, I put it off, but I was there—but the old powder does taste good, don't it? And ain't them guns just like music? Zip! There goes another one. Nine and close, now."

"Come," said Sayville. "The fire has almost reached the top. For fifteen minutes it will be a furnace in five minutes."

Mcclernand glanced around him in the darkness, and then he came to the tip of the tongue of flame could be seen intermittently licking up above the brow of the precipice. There was genuine regret in his tone.
